

Sales Pipeline and Stage Ownership

Move leads through the pipeline with a clear purpose, complete notes, and an owner at every stage.

Use this guide while watching, practicing, and reviewing. Write notes in your own words, then confirm live procedures against the current SOP.

Learning objectives

- Describe the purpose of each pipeline stage
- Identify the exit criteria for stages 1 through 4
- Use the five-step conversation framework
- Keep every active lead tied to a next action

Key ideas

- A stage describes what is true now, not what you hope will happen
- Do not advance a lead before the exit criteria are met
- Document the reason for every stage change
- The handoff begins only after qualification and discovery are complete

Practice and reflection

- Explain the main idea of Sales Pipeline and Stage Ownership without reading a script.
- Name one behavior you can demonstrate in your next seller or team interaction.
- Write one question you still need a manager or current SOP to answer.
- Record the next action you will take and when you will take it.

Source of truth

Current written SOP, role sheet, offer letter, and manager direction control when live procedures or role terms differ from training.

Quick review

Use these prompts for retrieval practice. Answer first, then compare your response with the guide.

1. How many total stages comprise the BMH Sales Pipeline?

Six

2. True or False: The acquisition and transaction teams handle Stage 5 (Offer Review) and Stage 6 (Contract).

True

3. Which of the following are common sources for a lead entering Stage 1 (Lead Capture)?

Marketing; Cold calling; Referrals

4. What must occur for a lead to exit Stage 1?

A real, live, two-way conversation with the seller

5. What is Pipeline Stage 2?

Qualification

6. How is 'equity' used as a qualification criterion in Stage 2?

It determines if there is enough value for a deal to make sense

Manager review notes
