

Humanizing the Lead

Recognize the people and pressures behind distressed-property data and determine whether BMH Group can genuinely help.

Use this guide while watching, practicing, and reviewing. Write notes in your own words, then confirm live procedures against the current SOP.

Learning objectives

- Describe the ideal seller profile
- Identify urgency, condition, equity, and decision-maker signals
- Use respectful first-person language
- Disqualify poor fits without dehumanizing the seller

Key ideas

- A lead is a person in a real situation
- Motivation is discovered through listening, not assumed from a list
- Hard filters protect both the seller and the team
- A seller's timeline and desired outcome matter as much as property data

Practice and reflection

- Explain the main idea of Humanizing the Lead without reading a script.
- Name one behavior you can demonstrate in your next seller or team interaction.
- Write one question you still need a manager or current SOP to answer.
- Record the next action you will take and when you will take it.

Source of truth

Current written SOP, role sheet, offer letter, and manager direction control when live procedures or role terms differ from training.

Quick review

Use these prompts for retrieval practice. Answer first, then compare your response with the guide.

1. How should leads in a CRM be viewed beyond being simple numbers?

As real people experiencing real-life problems

2. Why do heirs often avoid managing an inherited property themselves?

They lack the desire to manage tenants; They don't want to deal with contractors; They don't want to travel for repairs

3. What is a 'Tired Landlord'?

A property owner frustrated by bad tenants, maintenance issues, and financial losses

4. How do life events like divorce or job relocation impact a seller's needs?

They create a need for simplicity; They create a need for speed; They create a need for urgency

5. Why is it dangerous to spend too much time with unmotivated sellers?

They will waste the caller's time because they have no real pain or reason to accept a discount

6. Under what condition should a seller be referred to a real estate agent instead of an investor?

If the seller wants full retail value for a pristine house
