

Objection Scripts Playbook

Practice adaptable responses for price, timing, trust, competition, and decision-maker concerns.

Use this guide while watching, practicing, and reviewing. Write notes in your own words, then confirm live procedures against the current SOP.

Learning objectives

- Select a script pattern that matches the objection
- Adapt wording without changing its intent
- Use questions to reopen dialogue
- Know when to pause and seek guidance

Key ideas

- Scripts are guardrails, not lines to recite at any cost
- Use the seller's language when reflecting a concern
- Do not answer a question you do not understand
- A graceful exit protects trust when there is no fit

Practice and reflection

- Explain the main idea of Objection Scripts Playbook without reading a script.
- Name one behavior you can demonstrate in your next seller or team interaction.
- Write one question you still need a manager or current SOP to answer.
- Record the next action you will take and when you will take it.

Source of truth

Current written SOP, role sheet, offer letter, and manager direction control when live procedures or role terms differ from training.

Quick review

Use these prompts for retrieval practice. Answer first, then compare your response with the guide.

1. What are the four components of the objection-handling framework taught in BMH training?

Listen, acknowledge, ask, redirect

2. When a seller says "I want more money," the playbook response is to say you're probably capped but can check for room - right after asking if they're ready to sign and move forward today.

True

3. A seller says they don't know their price. Which prompts does the playbook use to draw out a number? (Select all that apply.)

"If you truly don't know, imagine you did know - what would that look like?"; The Craigslist car analogy: you wouldn't list a car for $0 and say "make me an offer"

4. A seller says "I'm talking to other investors." What's the recommended response?

Ask what has to happen before selling makes sense, then offer a cash option, a terms option, or both

5. When asked for a company name, you describe the business as a partnership that closes with a local title company so everything's transparent.

True

6. A seller says "I can't sell right now; I need more time." What's the goal of your response?

Take the pressure off and confirm a good time to chat again - no rush
