

Compensation Engine

Understand that compensation depends on the value a role owns and that the current written plan is always the source of truth.

Use this guide while watching, practicing, and reviewing. Write notes in your own words, then confirm live procedures against the current SOP.

Learning objectives

- Identify the current compensation source of truth
- Connect role outcomes to the role scorecard
- Know where to take compensation questions
- Avoid relying on another person's plan or an old example

Key ideas

- There is no universal formula for every role
- Use your current offer letter, written plan, or role sheet
- Ask your manager when any part of the plan is unclear
- Do not treat training examples or conversations as a compensation promise

Practice and reflection

- Explain the main idea of Compensation Engine without reading a script.
- Name one behavior you can demonstrate in your next seller or team interaction.
- Write one question you still need a manager or current SOP to answer.
- Record the next action you will take and when you will take it.

Source of truth

Current written SOP, role sheet, offer letter, and manager direction control when live procedures or role terms differ from training.

Quick review

Use these prompts for retrieval practice. Answer first, then compare your response with the guide.

1. Which description best separates compensation training from an employee's actual compensation terms?

Training explains the compensation components; the current written plan supplies the employee's binding terms.

2. What business purpose can ramp-period pay serve?

It provides income while the employee learns the role and develops a pipeline, subject to the plan.

3. A training example shows one ramp-pay amount. What may the learner safely conclude?

The example illustrates a concept; the current plan controls the actual terms.

4. Which evidence should a reviewer use to decide whether an employee has completed the ramp period?

The applicable ramp criteria plus documented results for the employee's measured review period.

5. What makes a transition from ramp compensation to a post-ramp structure valid?

Meeting the criteria and confirming the transition under the current plan.

6. Which record best supports a compensation-eligibility review for work on a lead?

A traceable CRM history showing sourcing, qualification, follow-up, and handoff activity.
