

Compensation Engine

Understand that compensation depends on the value a role owns and that the current written plan is always the source of truth.

Use this guide while watching, practicing, and reviewing. Write notes in your own words, then confirm live procedures against the current SOP.

Learning objectives

- Identify the current compensation source of truth
- Connect role outcomes to the role scorecard
- Know where to take compensation questions
- Avoid relying on another person's plan or an old example

Key ideas

- There is no universal formula for every role
- Use your current offer letter, written plan, or role sheet
- Ask your manager when any part of the plan is unclear
- Do not treat training examples or conversations as a compensation promise

Practice and reflection

- Explain the main idea of Compensation Engine without reading a script.
- Name one behavior you can demonstrate in your next seller or team interaction.
- Write one question you still need a manager or current SOP to answer.
- Record the next action you will take and when you will take it.

Source of truth

Current written SOP, role sheet, offer letter, and manager direction control when live procedures or role terms differ from training.

Quick review

Use these prompts for retrieval practice. Answer first, then compare your response with the guide.

1. What governs an employee's current compensation structure?

The current written compensation plan issued for that employee's role and effective date.

2. Before describing ramp-period pay, what must be checked?

The employee's current written compensation plan and its effective date.

3. Why should training avoid promising a fixed ramp-period pay amount?

Compensation terms can change and must come from the current written plan, not a training example.

4. Where is the current graduation requirement for a ramp period defined?

In the current written plan or role scorecard that applies to the employee.

5. How should an employee confirm what compensation structure applies after ramp?

Read the current written compensation plan and confirm any ambiguity with the authorized manager or People Operations contact.

6. What determines whether work on a lead qualifies for compensation?

The eligibility definitions in the current written compensation plan, applied to the documented lead activity.
