

Conversation Flow Mastery

Keep difficult conversations moving through thought experiments, option framing, price exploration, and respectful repositioning.

Use this guide while watching, practicing, and reviewing. Write notes in your own words, then confirm live procedures against the current SOP.

Learning objectives

- Use thought experiments to create clarity
- Frame available paths without false urgency
- Explore price expectations
- Re-engage or de-position gracefully

Key ideas

- Offer choices only when each choice is real
- Use curiosity to test assumptions
- Do not trap a seller into defending a number
- A clean de-position can preserve a future relationship

Practice and reflection

- Explain the main idea of Conversation Flow Mastery without reading a script.
- Name one behavior you can demonstrate in your next seller or team interaction.
- Write one question you still need a manager or current SOP to answer.
- Record the next action you will take and when you will take it.

Source of truth

Current written SOP, role sheet, offer letter, and manager direction control when live procedures or role terms differ from training.

Quick review

Use these prompts for retrieval practice. Answer first, then compare your response with the guide.

1. According to Module 14, what is the recommended opening line to start a seller conversation?

Catch me up to speed. Where are you at in the process right now?

2. Which questions does the flow recommend early in the call to learn what the seller has already explored?

How have the other investors treated you?; What did your real estate agent say?

3. A seller complains that the other investors were all lowballers. What is that telling you?

Exactly how to position yourself as different

4. Module 14 teaches that you should give your number first so you control the anchor.

False

5. Which question extracts the seller's price anchor without giving up leverage?

Do you and your family have a number you are looking for?

6. Which steps make up the simple 1-2-3 of a deal conversation?

Gather information; Test the cash lane; Open creative options

Manager review notes
