

Operator Playbook and Daily Mission Control

Run a disciplined workday, keep the pipeline current, and communicate decisions and blockers through the team's operating systems.

Use this guide while watching, practicing, and reviewing. Write notes in your own words, then confirm live procedures against the current SOP.

Learning objectives

- Prioritize daily lead work
- Maintain notes, stages, and next actions
- Use team communication channels professionally
- Close the day with a clean pipeline and clear plan

Key ideas

- Begin with scheduled and high-priority follow-ups
- Log notes immediately after meaningful activity
- Ask rather than guess when a situation is unfamiliar
- A worked day reflects complete controllable actions, not a guaranteed outcome

Practice and reflection

- Explain the main idea of Operator Playbook and Daily Mission Control without reading a script.
- Name one behavior you can demonstrate in your next seller or team interaction.
- Write one question you still need a manager or current SOP to answer.
- Record the next action you will take and when you will take it.

Source of truth

Current written SOP, role sheet, offer letter, and manager direction control when live procedures or role terms differ from training.

Quick review

Use these prompts for retrieval practice. Answer first, then compare your response with the guide.

1. Which tool do BMH operators use to clock in and track their time?

HubStaff

2. Why do Stage 3 leads come first when sorting the day's priorities?

They are the closest to moving forward to a handoff

3. Stage 1 leads are people the operator has not been able to connect with yet.

True

4. Which property details should you check in PropStream before calling?

Ownership; Liens; Tax status

5. Call notes should be logged in Sandra in one batch at the end of the day.

False

6. What should you be doing between dials to maximize contact attempts?

Firing off follow-up texts

Manager review notes
