

Opening the Call

Open seller conversations with permission, relevance, a clear frame, and a disciplined fact find.

Use this guide while watching, practicing, and reviewing. Write notes in your own words, then confirm live procedures against the current SOP.

Learning objectives

- Use the opening frame without sounding scripted
- Earn permission to continue
- Capture essential property and seller facts
- Transition from facts to deeper discovery

Key ideas

- State why you are calling and give the seller room to respond
- Use a calm pace and equal-status tone
- Write down details instead of relying on memory
- The fact find creates context. It does not replace discovery

Practice and reflection

- Explain the main idea of Opening the Call without reading a script.
- Name one behavior you can demonstrate in your next seller or team interaction.
- Write one question you still need a manager or current SOP to answer.
- Record the next action you will take and when you will take it.

Source of truth

Current written SOP, role sheet, offer letter, and manager direction control when live procedures or role terms differ from training.

Quick review

Use these prompts for retrieval practice. Answer first, then compare your response with the guide.

1. What is the primary objective of Step 1 in the five-step acquisition framework?

To open the call and set the tone for the entire conversation.

2. What is the primary objective of Step 2 in the five-step acquisition framework?

To conduct the fact find and understand the seller's situation.

3. How much time does an acquisition specialist have to set the tone during the call intro?

Approximately fifteen seconds.

4. Phrasing the call as the property being "paired with our company" frames the interaction as a ____.

Qualification.

5. How does framing a call as a qualification rather than a sales pitch affect the seller's dynamic?

It makes the seller feel they are being evaluated rather than sold to.

6. Which three specific benefits should be mentioned in the initial property buying program pitch?

Buying as-is, covering all closing costs, and having no commissions.
