

Discovery and Handoff

Uncover the seller's situation, consequences, timeline, and decision process then deliver a clean acquisition handoff.

Use this guide while watching, practicing, and reviewing. Write notes in your own words, then confirm live procedures against the current SOP.

Learning objectives

- Distinguish qualification from discovery
- Ask consequence and future-state questions
- Confirm decision-makers and expectations
- Complete a concise handoff with all required context

Key ideas

- Discovery explains why the seller may act
- Ask one question at a time and listen to the full answer
- Do not diagnose or advise outside your role
- A clean handoff lets the next person continue without making the seller repeat everything

Practice and reflection

- Explain the main idea of Discovery and Handoff without reading a script.
- Name one behavior you can demonstrate in your next seller or team interaction.
- Write one question you still need a manager or current SOP to answer.
- Record the next action you will take and when you will take it.

Source of truth

Current written SOP, role sheet, offer letter, and manager direction control when live procedures or role terms differ from training.

Quick review

Use these prompts for retrieval practice. Answer first, then compare your response with the guide.

1. What is the primary objective of the 'qualification' phase?

Determining if it is possible to do business with the person based on basic criteria

2. In the context of real estate leads, what does qualification confirm?

Property ownership; Residential status; Market location

3. True or False: The first answer a seller gives about their reason for selling is usually sufficient to understand their true motivation.

False

4. The question 'What would it mean for you to have this handled?' is used to uncover what?

The deeper layers of seller motivation

5. Why must a representative create 'safety' when asking about financial pressure?

Because sellers are often embarrassed about financial strain and need to feel safe to reveal it

6. What is the purpose of the 'what if' question in discovery?

To force the seller to confront the consequences of doing nothing
